Saturday, November 8. 1707.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Novemb. 5.

Rome, October 8.

THE Chevalier Nani, Ambaſſador of Venice, ſtopp'd at Spoleto, being put in Hope that the Conteſt with this Court touching the Ceremonial, would be terminated to the Satisfaction of the Republick. He had demanded, that the Acts made in Conſequence of his Refuſal to give the Salutation of Peace to the Conſtable Colonna, in the Chappel held by the Pope on the Nativity of the Virgin, ſhould be aboliſh'd, together with the Reſolutions (if formally drawn up in Writing) not to invite him to the Chappel, nor to give him Audience: But theſe Conditions appearing too hard, and he being inform'd great Oppoſition was made to the granting of them, he went from Spoleto to Aſſiſe, there to wait for further Orders from the Senate, who have already forbid the Eccleſiaſticks in their Dominions to pay any thing to the Apoſtolical Chamber. By Letters from Naples we learn, that the Imperialiſts fearing the Siege of Gaeta would draw out into great length, made a laſt Effort, giving an Aſſault by the Breach; and that notwithſtanding a great Loſs of Officers and Soldiers, they made themſelves Maſters of the Place, in which were taken the Duke d'Eſcalona, the Prince of Cellamare and the Duke de Biſaccia, both Nephews of Cardinal Giudice, and ſeveral other Lords.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Nov. 11.

Venice, Oct. 28. The Chevalier Nani, is arriv'd here incognito; and has receiv'd no Viſits yet at his Palace, except from his Relations.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Nov. 8.

Geneva, Oct. 28. Our laſt Advices from Turin import, that Prince Eugene continu'd there, but would ſpeedily ſet out for Milan: Whence they write the 25th of this Month, that the Imperial Troops were in full March from Piemont towards the Winter Quarters aſſign'd them in the Parmeſan, the Mantuan, and the Ferrareze; and that only 2 Squadrons and 4 Battallions were to Winter in the Milaneze, and thoſe were to be Quarter'd in ſuch a Manner as not to burthen the Country.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Novemb. 11.

Venice, Oct. 28. The Stormy Weather and Rains which we have had lately in theſe Parts, have been follow'd by deep Snows: Notwithſtanding which, the Troops of the Allies continue their March towards the Winter Quarters appointed for them: viz. the Heſſians (if they ſtay in Italy) are to have theirs in the Mantuan; the Pruſſians in the Dutchy of Piacenza, and the Imperialiſts in the Cremoneſe and the Dutchy of Mantua, except their Horſe, who are to Winter in the Ferrareze and the Bologneze, for the convenience of Forrage: Only a few Imperial Regiments will ſtay in the Milaneze, that State having having with a good Sum of Money purchas'd an Exemption from Winter Quarters. The Palatine Troops commanded by General Rhebinder purſue their March likewiſe from Piemont for Final, there to embark for Catalonia,

Genoa, Oct. 22. Here are 7 Men of War, Britiſh and Dutch, that are to be Convoys to a good Number of Tranſports, on board which 8 or 9000 Men of the Palatine Troops and others are going to be imbark'd for Barcelona. 'Tis reported, that M. de Villars is come out of Toulon with 6 Men of War, to cruiſe in the Ganal of Meſſina.

From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated Nov. 11.

Amſterdam, Nov. 11. They write from Paris, that a Squadron of Men of War commanded by M. du Caſſe ſail'd from Breſt the 19th of laſt Month, 'tis ſuppos'd for the Weſt-Indies.

Hague, Novemb. 11. 'All our Diſcourſes here, 'are of the Projects and Preparations which the 'Allies may think fit to agree upon this Winter, for 'the vigorous Proſecution of the War the next 'Campaign. What on this Subject we can learn 'to be beſt grounded, is; That in the firſt Place 'for Succouring King Charles in Spain, beſides the 'Palatines three Regiments of Imperialiſts and the 'Milanois Regiment of Boneſana of 1200 Men 'will be forthwith embark'd at Genoa and Final 'and tranſported to Catalonia: And for effectually 'aſſiſting that King to gain the Spaniſh Monarchy, 'tis thought the Allies will if poſſible find the Means 'to furniſh Prince Eugene with 30000 Men in all 'and fitting Neceſſaries of all ſorts, on which 'Terms his Highneſs offers to go and command 'in Spain. As for the Duke of Savoy, 'tis 'ſo much the Intereſt of the Allies to enable 'that wiſe and daring Prince to act offenſively, that 'we are inform'd 'tis deſign'd he ſhall have under 'his abſolute Command a Body of 40000 Men; 'tis alſo ſaid that nothing will be omitted to make 'up an Army of 50000 Men for the Elector of Ha'nover; and if beſides the grand Army in the 'Netherlands, a Separate Body be form'd to be 'employ'd either on the Moſelle or in the Low'Countries, it cannot reaſonably be doubted that 'the Enemy will have their Hands full on all Sides, 'and be very hard ſet. To compaſs all this, we 'are told it has been propos'd that Great Britain 'and Holland chiefly, ſhould augment their Forces; 'which they may do by hiring Forreigners, if they 'chuſe that Method; for 'tis ſaid divers Princes 'have already offer'd 40000 Men. The States ſeem 'diſpos'd to do every thing in their Power that can 'be requir'd of them; but 'tis ſuppos'd will wait till 'the Parliament of Great Britain ſet them an Ex'ample, before they form a final Reſolution on this 'Subject.
